CITY RECEIVES PLANNING GRANT TO ENHANCE CITY HALL PARK

In an effort led by Burlington City Arts, the City has received a $50,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to develop a master plan for City Hall Park. The goal of the grant is to identify ways that City Hall Park's vitality and livability can be enhanced through long-term planning.

Also involved in obtaining this important grant was the Community and Economic Development Office, Parks and Recreation Department, Burlington Business Association, Flynn Center for the Performing Arts, Merchants Bank, Preservation Trust of Vermont, and the King Street Youth Center.

Burlington City Arts will begin with a public engagement process to invite input on the community's vision for City Hall Park.

Burlington ranks 8th among 75 Mid-Size Cities for Volunteerism

The 2011 Volunteering in America report lists the Burlington area 8th among 75 comparable cities in the area of volunteerism. The Volunteering In America report is a partnership between the Corporation for National and Community Service, the U.S. Census Bureau, and the Bureau for Labor Statistics to collect volunteering data annually through the Current Population Survey's (CPS) Supplement on Volunteering.

The report covers 2007-2010 and shows the Burlington area with a Volunteer Rate of 37.7%, compared to 36.5% nationally, and 42 volunteer hours per resident annually, compared to 34.1 hours nationally.

Burlington's volunteerism has been supported in many ways by the City's VISTA program. This past year, CEDO VISTAs recruited 842 volunteers who performed 10,464 hours of service. Over the 17 years of the city's VISTA program, members recruited tens of thousands of volunteers statewide!

Federal Budget Issues

Burlington residents and all Americans should be disappointed in the details of the recent resolution of the federal debt ceiling. There's no question that the debt ceiling limit needed to be raised. To do so while cutting government programs and not increasing tax revenues to invest in America at a critical economic point has serious consequences.

Even many conservative economists concede that maintaining or increasing government spending is one of the solutions to a stalled economy, not a cause. Reduced investment in America risks derailing what is already a difficult national economic recovery.

Raising revenues would have signaled a willingness to shore up the nation's infrastructure, support people's needs, and create forward momentum for residents and businesses alike. Instead, the threat of the debt ceiling was used to further conservative political and economic interests, but not the public interest.

These decisions will have an impact on Burlington and other cities across the country. Federal cutbacks inevitably pressure local resources when cities and local agencies & organizations are forced to fill the gaps.

Despite this prospect, Burlington has been and will continue to be successful. We've seen new commercial development, implementation of an ambitious street paving program, downtown improvement projects which will enhance livability and economic activity, and a continued focus on meeting people's needs.

We will continue to need the federal government as a partner. The economic solution should include increased tax revenues from those who can pay and renewed investment in America.

With best regards,

Bob Kiss, Mayor
